Since the early 2000s, Amaryllis has pioneered the remanufacturing and reuse of office and contract furniture – on a commercial scale. Be it resizing, reupholstering or completely transforming the colour and finish of a particular item, Amaryllis works with customers and interior designers to maximise the useful life of furniture and equipment.

Amaryllis' 'One' Chair

a specialist, ergonomic chair capable of being specified to meet an individual's assessment. The chair has been specifically designed for reuse and reconfigured to match an alternative requirement.

This model is upholstered using Camira Fabrics' Main Line Flax range - a new inherently flame retardant, 70% Wool and 30% Flax fibre fabric from sustainable sources.

The start of the recession and influx of low cost, imported furniture resulted in many potential customers questioning the 'payback' of reuse. Thankfully, the economies of scale of our operations together with the growing appreciation of the environmental impact – and cost – of simply discarding any old furniture has led to a substantial increase in remanufacturing.

We can propose really 'of the moment' finishes and designs – and you can be confident that designs can be updated as trends change and evolve. We can also resize furniture to maximise valuable office space.

There's Social Value too.

Amaryllis operates workshops within prisons offering a structured work discipline together with skills-specific training. We also seek to provide employment upon release for our prison workers – either within the Group or our network of potential employers. Employment is proven to reduce reoffending – a benefit to the individual and society.
